THE OREGON

FOUNDATION

"It's something that's in everybody's capacity to walk the walk, talk the talk, do the good work and do as much as you possibly can to support the future of our community. So we all grow into our greatest capacity. And OCF, that's their mantra. That's what they do."

MESSAGE FROM THE BOARD

"We celebrate the power of philanthropy to change lives and strengthen communities for a prosperous Oregon we'll create together, for future generations."

KIRBY DYESS
OCF Board Chair

Dear Friends of OCF,

As we reflect on our collective service to Oregon's communities throughout 2017, we are grateful for the time, talents and resources of the vast network of partnerships catalyzing philanthropy in Oregon and entrusting OCF as a steward of your generosity:

- 2,220 nonprofits helping Oregonians in every corner of our state
- 160 Leadership Council members serving as advocates, ambassadors and advisors to connect OCF with their communities
- 1,669 volunteers serving across Oregon
- Thousands of donors supporting causes they believe in

These are the people positively impacting Oregon, creating vibrant and rewarding lives for all Oregonians.

"Impact" also comes to mind as the OCF endowment reaches $2 billion in assets under management in 2017. It is with great appreciation that we approach the stewardship of these assets, ensuring that your giving continues well into the future.

In 2017, your contributions generated $118 million in grants and scholarships to organizations and individuals in every county in Oregon. These funds change lives. They bring opportunities to those who might not receive them otherwise. They create a ripple effect of inspiration, engaging new volunteers, donors and community service-minded Oregonians.

OCF is a force for good in Oregon. The stories, photos and numbers you will read in these pages tell a remarkable story. Your support and leadership in service to communities around our state provide hope for a better future for decades to come.

With gratitude,
OCF Board of Directors

ADVANCING OPPORTUNITY

Too often, Oregon's low-income children, children of color and rural children don't get the same opportunities as others. These disparities have lifelong consequences. We invest in cradle-to-career programs, creating opportunities for children, families and communities to learn and thrive.

LATINO MENTORSHIP PROGRAM

Narrowing the Opportunity Gap for Latino High School Students

"We take for granted many things we might have as mainstream," says Elysia Kiyija, Big Brothers Big Sisters program director, about those of us who grew up expecting to attend college or get a good job. But when Latino students from immigrant or lower-income backgrounds have these aspirations, they often discover the opportunity gap between them and their peers. "A lot of our kids might grow up and [get low-skill] jobs through parent connections," Kiyija says.

A partnership funded by OCF and other organizations is narrowing this gap with a mentorship program serving 15 to 20 Latino students each year. This program is based on the shared expertise of Central Oregon Community College (COCC), Big Brothers Big Sisters of Central Oregon, and OCF's Central Oregon Latino Partnership Program. Its recently launched third cohort matches Central Oregon high school juniors with Latino professionals who provide 18 months of mentorship. The Latino Partnership Program at OCF supports Latino educational achievement, leadership development, and engagement.

Christy Walker (pictured on the left) coordinates COCC's Latino college preparation program. She also mentors students like Mountain View High School senior Celina Anaya-Aguilera (pictured on the right). "Celina wants to go and travel," Walker says. "But she understands that her best option is to start at COCC first." Together, they're working to secure scholarships to achieve that goal.

"The goal of the program is to help students find their way," Walker says. "It's helping them figure out what the right path is for them."

PRESCHOOL TO PROFESSIONAL PARTNERSHIP PROGRAM

Lifting Child Care Burdens for College-Going Parents

Ontario resident Andrea Nungaray wanted to attend college to become a nurse. But to do this, she needed to find child care for her son, Evan. Although Malheur County lacks child care options, she was lucky enough to get a spot at Giggles & Grace Early Learning Center. Initially, she struggled to cover the cost of Evan's care while studying at Treasure Valley Community College (TVCC). Then, she found out about the Preschool to Professional Partnership program, which was launched in 2017 with OCF funding to give TVCC students access to child care.

Shawn Reynolds, executive director of Giggles & Grace, created this program in partnership with TVCC. It also helps to cover tuition, textbook and national certification costs for four TVCC early childhood education students, in the expectation that they will narrow the child care gap in Oregon after graduating. Giggles & Grace serves as the internship site for these students, who work alongside full-time staff to complete their required 480 practicum hours.

"I truly believe that when these interns graduate, they'll easily land a job in Oregon, making us valuable to other communities," Reynolds says.

"My dream is to have a parent that is an intern working in our program. That's really a win-win situation. You're helping a parent get their education with their child."

"The Creative Heights grant is all about challenge. Artists want to show somebody else. My vulnerability is what I have to showcase here."

JAYANTHI RAMAN

Rasika Director of Education & Outreach

RASIKA

Taking Chances with Art

After 16 seasons of bringing classical Indian art performance to Oregon, Hillsboro-based Rasika took a leap forward last year with Jayanthi Raman's production of Duality: An Immigrant Experience. This innovative performance was supported by a Creative Heights grant from OCF.

"The Creative Heights grant is all about challenge," says Raman. With this in mind, she wrote about one of the hardest things for her to discuss: herself. "Artists want to show somebody else. My vulnerability is what I have to showcase here." Told through classical Indian dance with English subtitles, Duality is Raman's story of immigrating to Oregon 30 years ago from the city of Chennai in eastern India. With 16 dancers, the performance depicts a young woman's struggle in a new country:

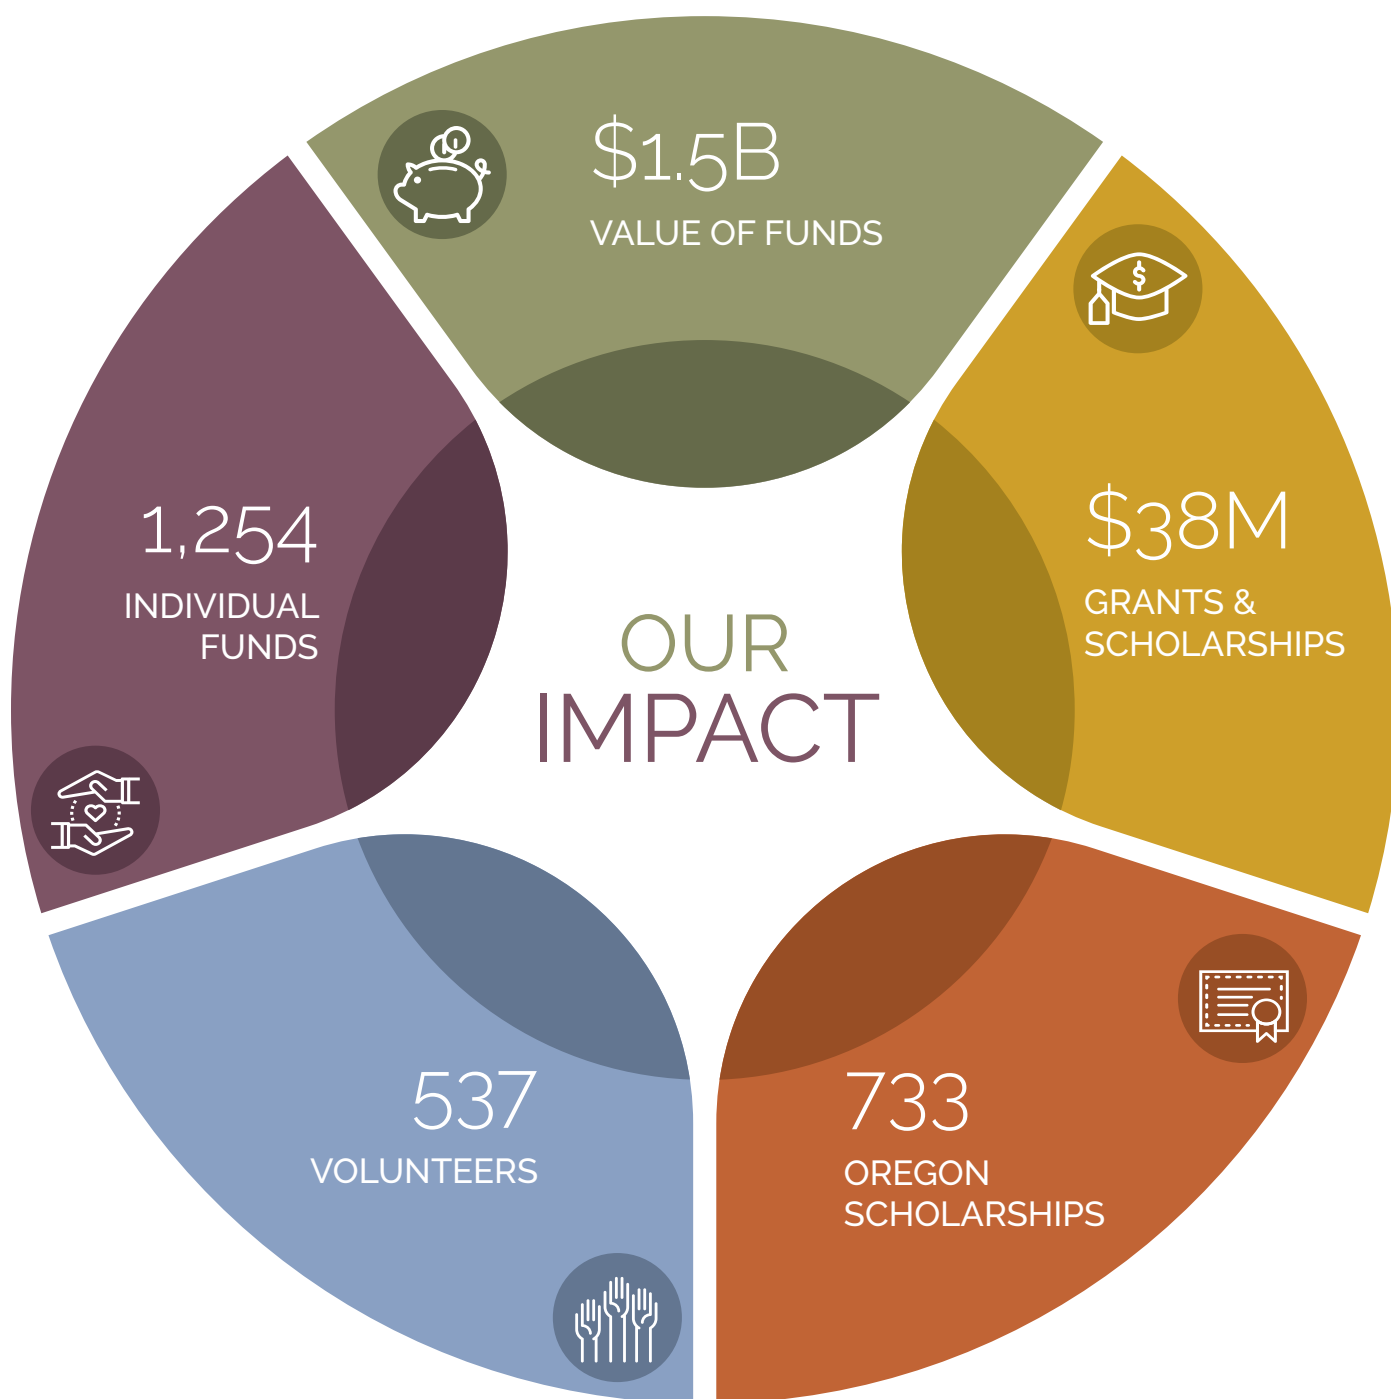

from the homesickness and the striving to come into her own, to the triumph of becoming part of her adopted home.

Raman's personal story had a wide impact when performed in spring 2017 at the Newmark Theatre. "I remember people after the performance coming up to me and saying, 'You know, that girl — that was me,'" she says. "This performance moved them because they connected with the character and their lives being portrayed in bits and pieces."

Thanks to the show's success — as well as a community grant from OCF — Raman is taking Duality on the road to rural Oregon in 2018.

“We need organizations like OCF now more than ever. And we need people not to be miserly but to look to their resources and understand that you can't take it with you, so put it to something that can make a difference.”

MARY BLAKE

Member of OCF's North Coast Leadership Council

MARY BLAKE

Ensuring Everyone Has the Opportunity to Play

Mary Blake's mission is to ensure that every adult and child has the opportunity to play. She oversaw 14 community pools for Portland Parks & Recreation in the early 1980s — an era of declining government funding and rising fees for once-free pools. “Morale was about as high as a snake's hips,” she recalls. This uncertain period was Blake's catalyst for 30 years of community building centered on improving access to water play.

In 1984, Blake was drawn to the open waters of Seaside, where she joined Sunset Empire Park & Recreation District. In 1986, she encountered OCF through the Lester and Sarah Louise Raw Seaside Youth Fund, which initially launched a scholarship program to get low-income kids to the pool and later supported after-school programming and a nutrition program. “At every step of the way, OCF was there. OCF has their name on almost every project we ever got involved with,” Blake says.

Now retired, Blake continues her community-building work by serving on OCF's North Coast Leadership Council. She's also establishing a permanently endowed testamentary fund that will support parks and recreation programming for young women and girls, and food and health programs along the North Coast, for decades to come. And her legacy gift with OCF will support programs she believes in beyond her lifetime.

“My life has been very blessed,” Blake says. “It just takes your breath away when you know that you can support the things you believe in.”

FREEMAN GREEN & JEFF MOORE

Guiding Their Clients to Intentional Giving

For Freeman Green and Jeff Moore, partners of the estate planning group at the Salem-based business law firm Saalfeld Griggs, integrity means working closely with clients to honor their wishes. And OCF makes it easier for them to do that. "There's a feeling throughout the firm that OCF just tries to do what is best and most flexible for clients," says Moore.

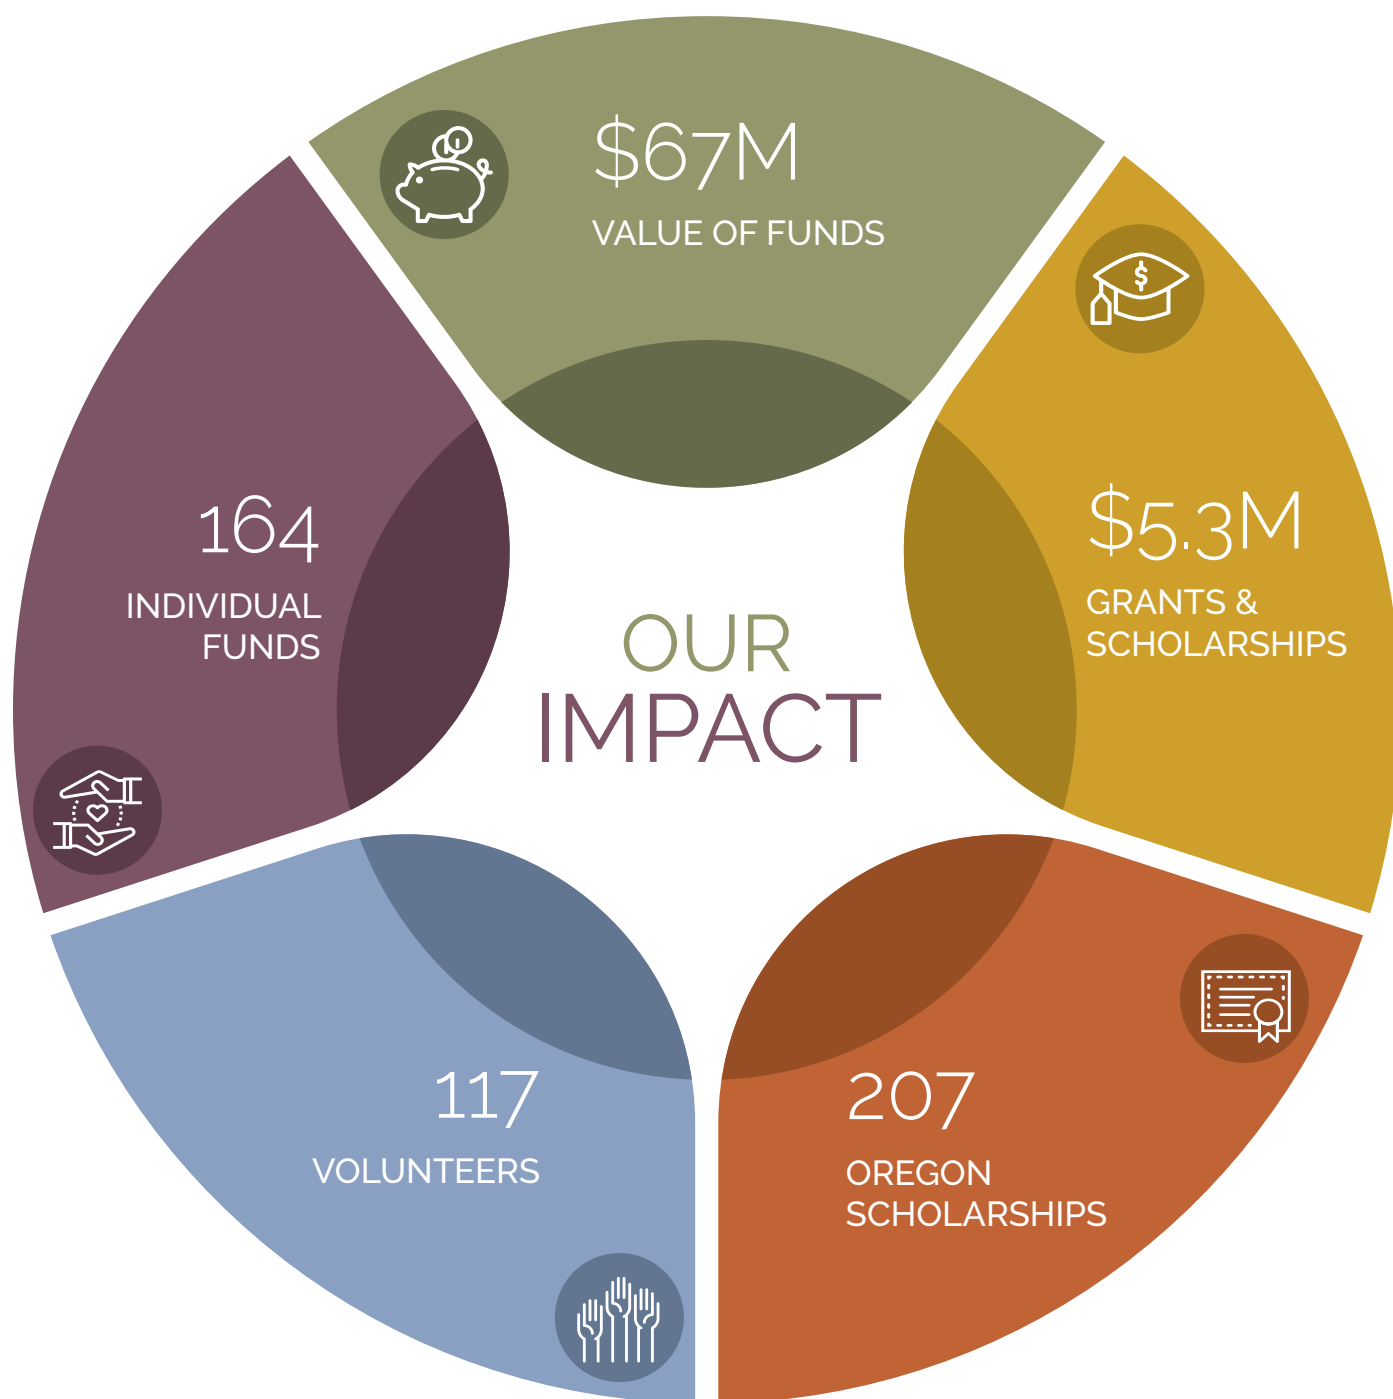

Moore (pictured on the right) recalls a recent experience with a husband and wife who had a sizable estate. "The husband had a laundry list of organizations that he wanted to benefit," he says. "And the spouse had her laundry list of causes and organizations. They weren't the same, but there was a common theme." When Moore suggested a field of interest fund at OCF, the couple was thrilled that there was a way to satisfy all of their interests.

"Oftentimes, we will encounter clients who are excited about philanthropy, but over time, they've reached a point where they're unsure how to build that into their estate plan," Green adds. "It's fun to talk to those clients about donor advised funds. Sometimes, it's a surprise to them that there are charities that give their money away to other charities."

Green and Moore understand that every client's legacy matters, and they know OCF understands this too. "Knowing OCF has been around for a long time, continues to grow and has done a tremendous job, our clients feel confidence in OCF," Moore says.

MARY PACZESNIAK

Bringing Her Focus to Schools

Mary Paczesniak was an accomplished student athlete in the days before Title IX prohibited sex discrimination in athletics programs at federally funded schools. After graduating from Oregon State University, she spent 28 years as a physical education teacher at Rogue River Middle School.

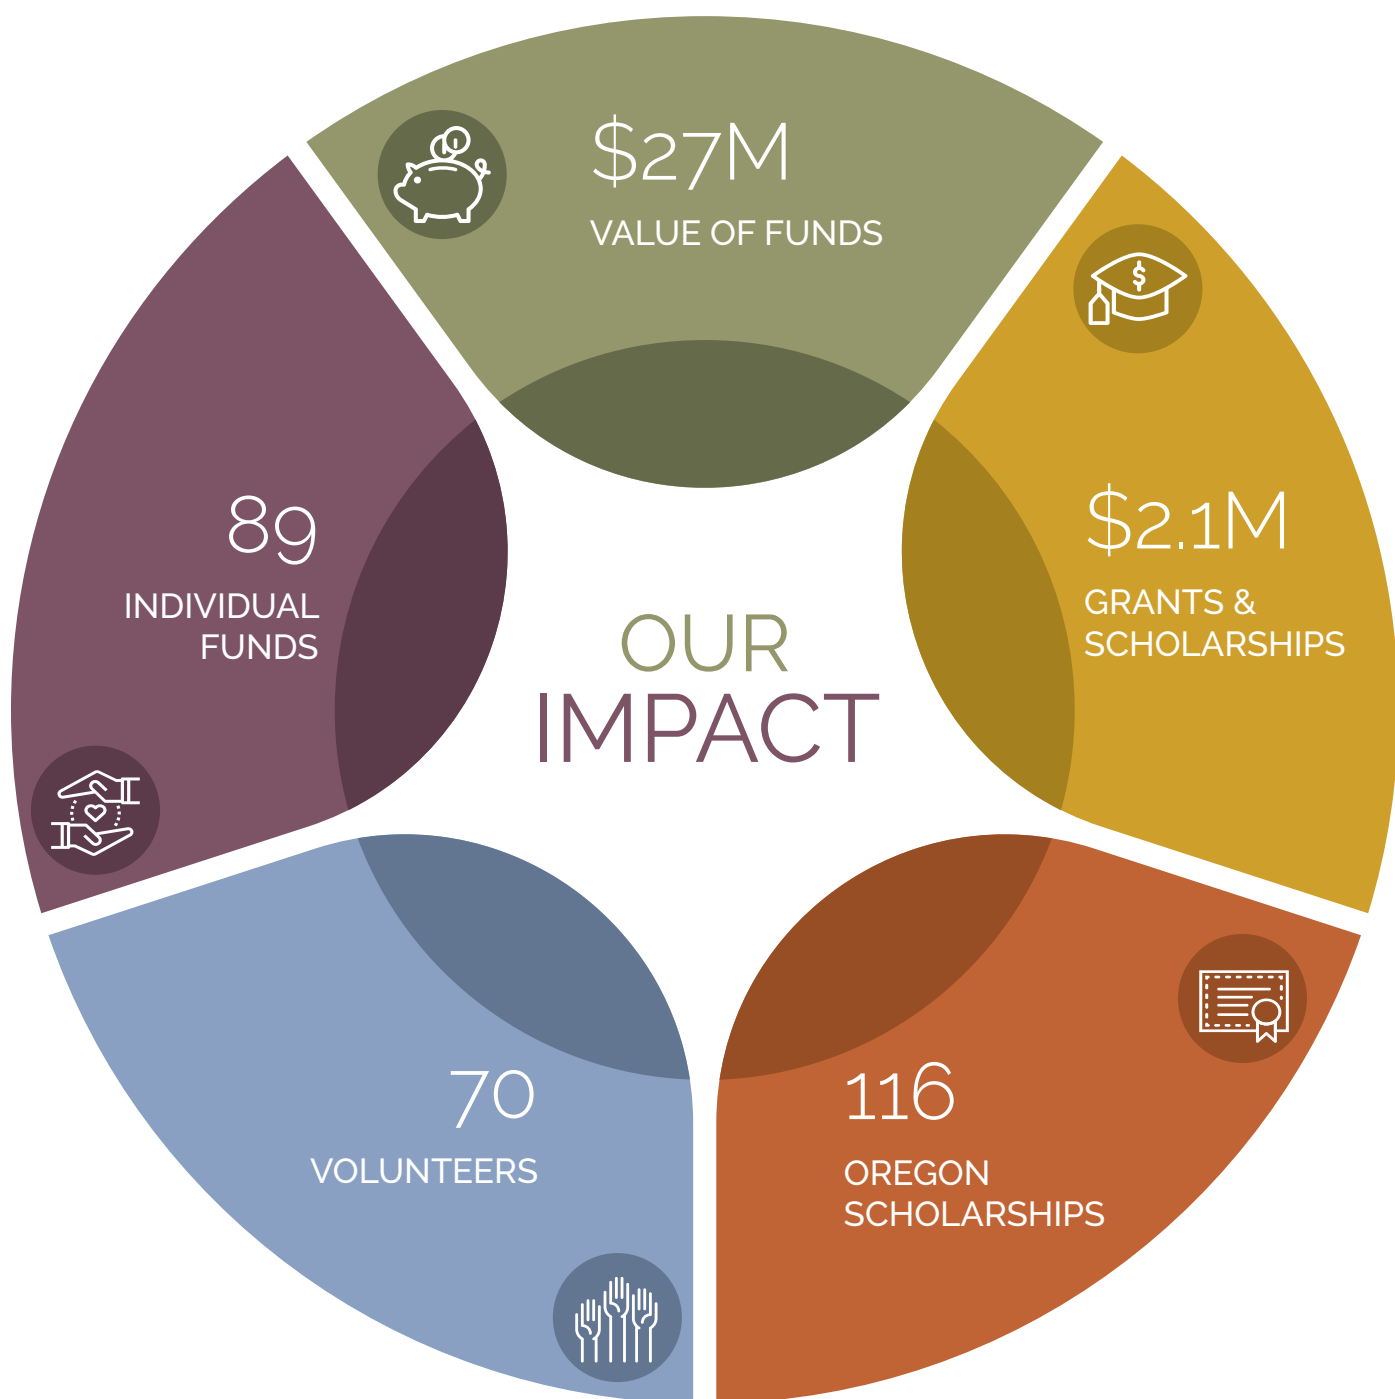

Upon retiring in 2003, she returned home to Coos Bay and began volunteering on the Marshfield High School Athletic Hall of Fame committee, where she led the effort to honor pre-Title IX female athletes by awarding them their Marshfield varsity letters in a special ceremony. More recently, she celebrated one of her proudest achievements: Marshfield High School's Heritage Hall, dedicated to the history of Coos Bay's high school. "Not every school has something like this!" she says proudly.

Although Paczesniak loves volunteering, she wanted to make a longer-lasting impact. Over the last three years, she has worked to establish The Paczesniak Family Fund, an OCF donor advised fund created through step-up contributions. In 2017, the fund's first grant provided swim parkas for the Marshfield swim team, which practices in an outdoor pool.

Paczesniak appreciates donor advised funds because they have the agility to follow the evolving needs of her community. "Everybody knows where my heart is," says Paczesniak. She trusts that through OCF, her fund will always follow the directions of her heart.

ALICE & SAM DINSDALE

Promoting the Needs of Their County

Alice and Sam Dinsdale, owners of Dinsdale Farm & Equipment, began their philanthropic work with OCF a decade ago. They were invited to serve on the committee of the Clinton and Mary Anne Basey Scholarship Fund, which offers postsecondary scholarships to local students who, as Alice puts it, "had an interest in farming and ranching but probably wouldn't qualify for other scholarships."

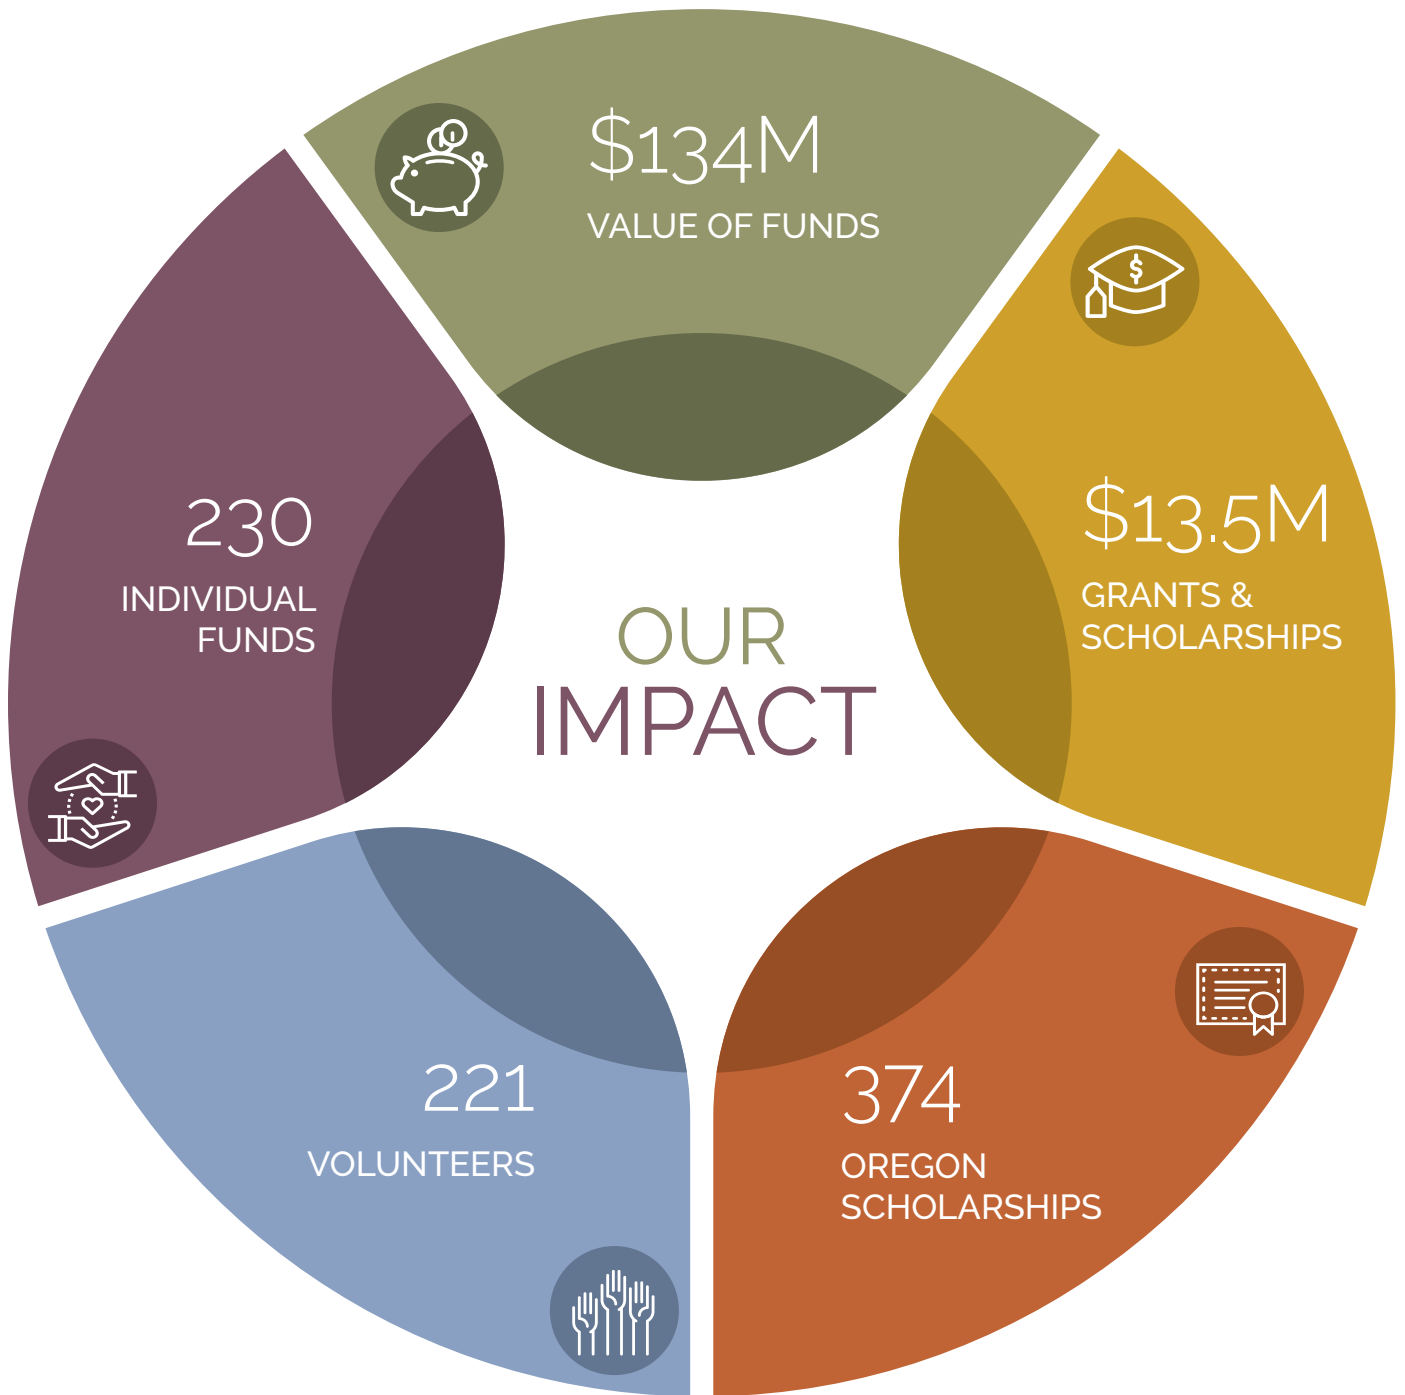

In addition to serving on this committee, Alice is a member of OCF's Southern Oregon Leadership Council. In this role, she informs her community about assistance available through OCF — including grants to narrow the regional opportunity gap — while also alerting OCF to high-priority needs in Lake County.

The Dinsdales are particularly pleased to have partnered recently with their friends, neighbors and OCF to fund the only preschool in north Lake County and the only all-weather track in a 60-mile radius. Next on the Dinsdales' community improvement list is an emergency management system that can efficiently serve this large rural area.

"The community here is very remote," Alice says. "The north end of the county tends to feel forgotten at times. With OCF's help, though, there may be some things out here that we can improve on."

OAKRIDGE MOBILE HOME PARK

Providing Safe and Affordable Housing

If you visit Oakridge Mobile Home Park today, you'll see clean homes with new siding, white picket fences and neat gravel walkways. You'll also see a beautifully tended playground with fresh wood chips. It's a far cry from the park's condition just three years ago, when it was the source of three or four 911 calls per day in this small mountain community.

"It was a nightmare," says Paul Neville from St. Vincent de Paul, which bought the property in 2014. "Drug dealers, prostitution. Just an absolute nightmare." Gienia Baines, St. Vincent de Paul's social service director, became the driving force for turning that nightmare into dream homes for residents of the park's 65 units.

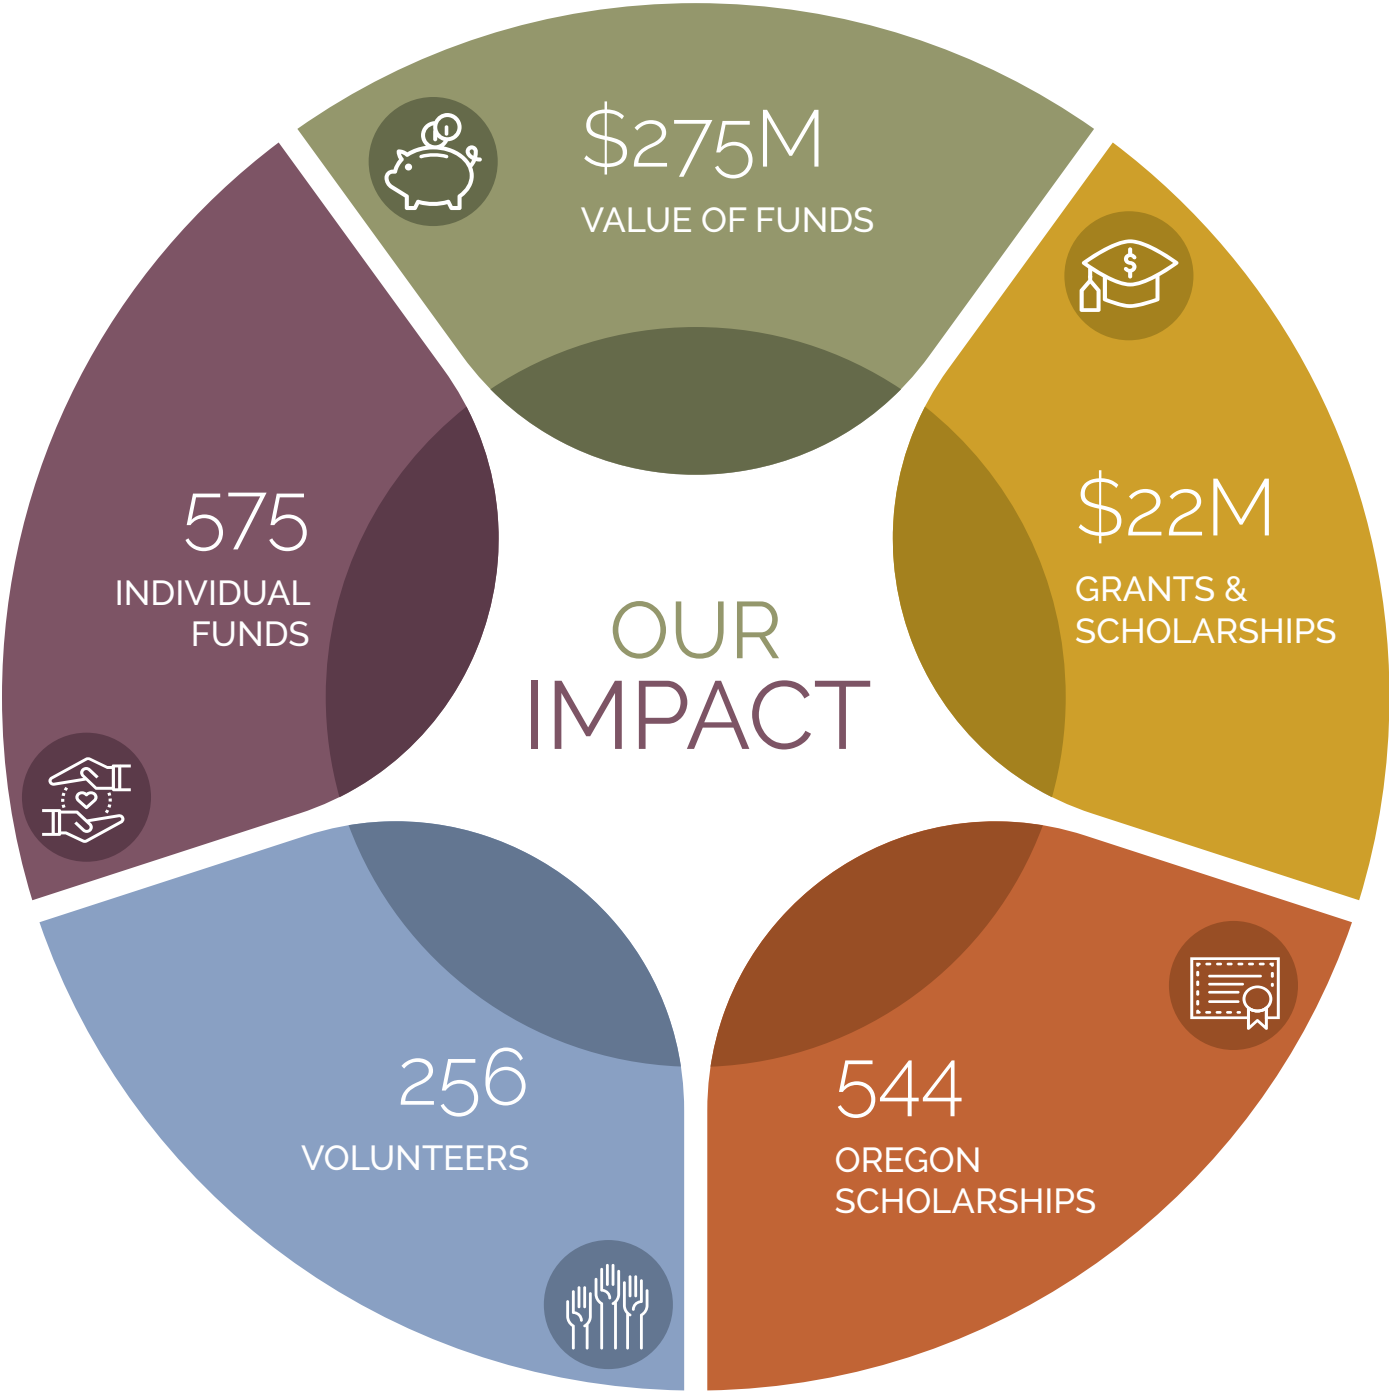

With support from OCF donor advised funds, Baines and 90 volunteers removed seven football fields' worth of debris. Workers renovated homes and built a laundry facility, community center, picnic area and playground. "We're getting more children in the park, and that was the idea: to make it family friendly," Baines says. These days, the park accounts for only four or five 911 calls per month.

St. Vincent de Paul hopes to replicate this success at roughly 1,400 other units across Oregon. To Paul Neville, it shows how supporting affordable housing makes a tangible difference in people's lives. "It's kind of a microcosm," he explains. "It went from an area you didn't walk in, at risk of your safety. And now you can sit and watch the kids and barbecue."

JON JAQUA

A founding family member of the Family Giving Center

THE FAMILY GIVING CENTER

Telling a Family Story Through Giving

"When my parents began their family and careers in Eugene, Oregon, it was a very different place than it is today," Jon Jaqua says. "Although young, they immersed themselves in almost every aspect of the growth and development of that community, including causes related to children, education, arts, social issues and business development. It was easy for me to follow their lead, as serving the community was ingrained in me through active participation with them.

"However, the next generation and those in the future don't necessarily have that mentorship. The social issues faced today are more complex and need charitable assistance from a broader array of resources and services."

OCF's Family Giving Center encourages candid conversations about charitable giving. Working directly with family members across generations, family giving specialists facilitate discussion of individual motivations and guide them toward a shared family approach to community building and strategic giving.

"Essentially, we help families discover the joy in working together to give," says Laura Winter, vice president of the Family Giving Center. "Together, we explore a vision and a common set of values that ultimately create a narrative for future generations to understand and model the next phase of philanthropy."

"I've learned so much working with my children," says Ken Austin Sr. "It's the most businesslike thing we've done together. The joy is in the teamwork — not only dealing with decisions about money, but our beliefs and passions."

The Family Giving Center's team of intergenerational giving specialists helps each family develop a meaningful, personal giving plan based on a customized approach to achieving their charitable goals. OCF facilitates family meetings, offers expertise on governance, identifies opportunities to leverage funding, and engages a robust research department that deploys data to direct the family's charitable investments toward long-term, sustainable solutions.

The result? Families are more strategic with their giving and have a greater community impact.

The Hampton family says, "We see the creation of the Hampton Legacy Fund as an important step in communicating the opportunity for families to make an impact on Oregon's future. OCF has been instrumental in helping our family focus our philanthropic endeavors toward effective strategies. Perhaps even more important, OCF has been an indispensable partner in mentoring our next generation of family members in the complex process and deep personal reward of effective giving."

"OCF's investment in our fund is $2 million. Even though we ultimately have to pay it back, it's money we can use immediately to help address Oregon's affordable housing crisis."

BILL VAN VLIET

Executive Director of Network for Oregon Affordable Housing (NOAH)

The Oregon Impact Fund will boost NOAH's ability to finance affordable housing efforts around the state, including projects like Oakridge Mobile Home Park, profiled on p. 34.

OREGON IMPACT FUND

Transforming Oregon Through Impact Investing

After being laid off by two shoe repair shops during the recession, Julie Derrick of Portland realized she wanted to own her own shop. But as a single mother and the only income-earner in her household, securing a traditional loan would've been difficult, if not impossible.

Derrick sought assistance from Micro Enterprise Services of Oregon (MESO), a community development financial institution (CDFI) that provides business loans and training to low-income communities and other populations underserved by traditional banks.

With support from MESO over the past decade, Derrick has launched and expanded JD's Shoe Repair. "I don't know how anyone makes it in small business without something like MESO," she says. "I just can't picture my life without them, because there are so many stumbling blocks and so many things to figure out as a business person."

OCF and its donor community launched the Oregon Impact Fund in May 2017 with business owners like Derrick in mind. This $20 million fund — which combines committed capital from 24 OCF donors with matching funds from the OCF endowment — supports MESO and other organizations that foster social, environmental and economic vitality in Oregon. Along with creating and retaining jobs in underserved communities, the Fund promotes affordable housing, education, natural resource management and access to health care.

For Craig Kelley, managing trustee of the Lora L. and Martin N. Kelley Family Foundation Trust, the Oregon Impact Fund aligns with his foundation's movement toward achieving positive social and environmental change as well as financial returns. He sees OCF's established role in Oregon as important to this goal. "The Kelley Family Foundation has an ability to be more nimble with risk-taking," he says. "Participating in the lower-risk Oregon Impact Fund plays a complementary role."

Currently, OCF's impact investments are supporting proven organizations such as Community LendingWorks in Springfield, NOAH in Portland, and Craft3 in Astoria, Bend, Klamath Falls and Portland. With investments ranging from $500,000 to $2 million, the Oregon Impact Fund allows Oregonians like Julie Derrick to realize their personal dreams while also helping their communities to thrive.

* Endowment partner funds are OCF funds established by charitable organizations in Oregon to serve as their endowments. The Foundation maintains variance power and legal ownership of the funds and reports them as assets. In accordance with Accounting Standards Codification 958-605-25-33, a liability has been established for the fair value of the funds, which is generally equivalent to the present value of future payments expected to be made to the charitable organization.
